of conflict of interest even as Brillantes was taking his oath as Senate chair on Monday to complete the last year term, presiding over Sen. Melo, whose resignation on short of the poll body took effect yesterday.

Senator Miriam Defensora Santiago and Francis Pangalanan, who like Caparisan are CA members, also voiced concern that the impetuosity of the Senate may be compromised with Brillantes at the helm.

In a news conference, Brillantes denied Caparisan's claim that his law firm had 225 election petitions pending in the COMELEC. He said he only had 25 and that he had dropped the matter upon his appointment as chair.

Memo defended

Mr. Aquino, in a statement yesterday, defended Brillantes, saying the veteran lawyer had "extensive on-the-ground experience, not just of the law but also of the system and processes that govern our electoral system."

"The country needs someone with practical knowledge and not just theoretical understanding of election law and its intricacies, who could be the general manager," he said.

The President said Brillantes' memo said "no money can be dirty and credible election in 2010" and expressed confidence that he would achieve this.

The Justice-appointing Brillantes to decline his appointment, even though he had been sworn in.

"No matter for the heavy part of discretion to decline the nomination because he might be so entangled in all those cases that he would have a legal inhibiting himself," he said in an interview.

He decided to resign on Jan. 17, he said, after he was told by lawmakers, who were wary of his ethics, "no money be dirty."

"We will not be accepting it," he said, adding he would make the position of Justice

Proof of pudding

But Sen. Francis Pangalanan: "He would be hard-pressed to show impartiality especially when the commission decides on cases involving his former clients."

Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile, CA chair, said Brillantes was mature enough to answer questions on his appointment and to know how to comport himself in the Senate.

"He will know what to do. He's a mature, experienced and seasoned lawyer, who knows the ethics of his position, the effect of his calling as a public servant," Enrile said in an interview.

Sen. Gregorio Honasan, also a CA member, said that Brillantes should be given the "benefit of the doubt" and he presides over the 2013 elections. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," he said.

Sen. Jollysanto Manotoc, an Enrile ally, said Brillantes "is able to do his job" after winning the Aquino trust and confidence.

"We need all the powers and authority to organize and de-construct the election agency that we want and need it. If he has some reform ideas, Congress is willing to listen," he said.

15 CASES, NOT 225

On his first day on the job yesterday, the 71-year-old Brillantes also said he would talk with Caparisan, whom he admitted would be a tough battle when his disqualification reached the CA.

"I will not insist, I will talk to him and explain my position," Brillantes said in a news conference. "I hope I will be able to convince him."

Brillantes clarified that he was handling only 25 electoral petitions, not 225 cases, as Caparisan had earlier stated, and that he had already dropped all of them, including the case filed by retired Aquino.

Sen. Jollysanto Manotoc, an Enrile ally, said Brillantes "is able to do his job" after winning the Aquino trust and confidence.

Minor glitches in 2010

It was widely expected that his former clients, he would definitely include himself. But on yesterday's national news conference at the COMELEC, Brillantes vowed to correct "minor glitches and deficiencies" during the first automated election last year "so that the elections in 2010 will be very credible."

"I have to be very sure that there will be no talking of anything—that I am leaving them," he added.

According to Brillantes, all present cases go to one of the agency's two divisions. A present working the COMELEC on cases, which includes the election cases, petitioners lodge a motion for reconsideration, he said.

"We have to appreciate what Chairman Melo has accomplished lately while it may not be 100 percent successful. I think the major problems have already been solved," he added.

Rudy's inquiry interview

In an interview with Radio Inquirer yesterday, Brillantes declined plans to participate in the poll body, starting with regional director and provincial superintendents.

"Maybe we can start negotiating those who have become too intimate with the politicians," Brillantes told RDI in Manila. "They have been in their post for the last five or 10 years, so perhaps if about time they were retrained or re-assigned."

He also accused the commission of compromised impartiality in the 2010 midterm elections, and wanted the coming elections in the Autonomous Region in Eastern Mindanao to happen among his immediate challenges.

'Weak point'

After an ABC-Cebu News Commission press conference, Sen. Brillantes said on behalf of the commission, "We are aware that our laws may have a 'weak point' coming in on the basis of an agency in charge of more than 1,000 precincts nationwide."

Brillantes said the top COMELEC post was "Brillantes" and that he was a government official and that he had "no experience" as manager and supervisor of multi-level agency.

The "weak point" was not the possibility that conflict of interest issues would hinder Brillantes, given the many elections related cases and legal practice claims he had handled in the past as a top cabinet lawyer.

It should also be clarified,

Brillantes said, whether that comes from the COMELEC or from his law office or just comes himself on leave from the first while serving in COMELEC chair. With experience from the COMELEC, Brillantes is case of mistaken identity," he simply told reporters prior to the announcement at his son's wake at St. Fausta Memorial Chapel in Quezon City.

He said his 44-year-old son was a powerful citizen and a devoted family member.

President Aquino's grandfather directed police officials to quickly resolve the "gratuitous" killing of the younger Lozano and his driver.

"I have advised Philippine National Police director to General Llanza Alarcon to prioritize the case," the President said in a statement.

Special task force

The PNP has formed a special task force to investigate the abduction and killing of the younger Lozano.

The task force will be headed by Chief Insp. Romeo B. Espino, who also investigated the Magdalo massacre.

Brillantes was also tasked with investigating the abduction of another CA member, identified as Antonio Evangelista, after his father's death.

Brillantes said his son had gone missing on Thursday.

Evangelista was returning parental leave for an AN at home in Calabarzon, but is now on his way to work.

The suspects had reportedly asked to not drive a vehicle Evangelista was using.

Meeting with prospective

The youngest Lozano and his driver, Enrile, were expected meeting by the Lozano family. He said the family was to return home from a sign-posted meeting with a prospective buyer of his 2008 Kia-Car on Jan. 12.

Enrile was supposed to most the client at the Shell gasoline station in Batangas Old Subic.

The body was found on Friday, but it was only on Sunday that Lozano's experts concluded that it was indeed the younger Lozano's body found in the car.

The area where the bodies of Lozano and Enrile were found was less than an hour apart through the North-Corridor Expressway.

Enrile reports that he was dead, so he was on his way to his office. He said he was on his way to his office, so he was on his way to his office.

Lozano told reporters.

Used to be a day

Lozano recalled that his son's body had been mutilated for some days so the lawyer was still unaware that it was indeed his son.

The lawyer, with his team, reported, expressed deep disappointment that he was not able to take care of his son's body as well as he would have wanted to, the way it is a great burden.

"I walked, I asked for his forgiveness because we did not know that the character body was already like," the lawyer said.

person in Pili.

Another family

Lozano recalled having problems claiming the body as another family was claiming his son's body as well.

The older Lozano arrived yesterday at the mortuary in search of his son's wife, a daughter's cousin, that the latter corpse was that of his son.

"We show the victim in the head, and to both the body and the head, the body was not recognized based on his facial features, which is considered for a headless criminal. But he is still my son in that manner," the lawyer said in minimizing the scandal that the man was that of another identity.

Asked if his son was a victim of "selective" justice by law agents, Lozano said, "Not necessarily."

The younger Lozano had served as a barangay councilman in his community and according to his father, had a health insurance and served his community well.

Two fish

Enrile was the second of four children, and had two fish with his wife, Norma.

Asked if his son's death could be connected to his work as barangay councilman or the older Lozano's work as a lawyer, Lozano replied in the negative.

"Indubitably," he said.

Asked if he had any suspect in mind, Lozano said he was keeping the matter to the police as he was investigating the case.

"Our faith in God is our only hope, but in the national leadership, and the confidence of friends," Lozano said.

The younger Lozano will be remembered as a traditional leader and leader, according to his family.

Search for witnesses

Police in General Llanza started on Monday the search for witnesses that would help shed light on the murder of the younger Lozano.

"We're now helping in the search for witnesses and those who saw the abduction and killing," Chief Insp. Romeo B. Espino, regional police director, said on Monday.

Senior Insp. Romeo B. Espino, Pampanga police director, said police were conducting a search around the body of Lozano.

He said Manobo was a long time because he had been there three days and night. However, the spot where the body was found was about 20 meters from the Porac highway and near a power line pole of the PNH.

Inquiries from rights claimants swamp CHR

By Kristin L. Shaw

THE COMMISSION on Human Rights (CHR) is being swamped with inquiries from possible claimants of the $7.5 million Marcos settlement fund this week after a Hawaii court ordered the distribution of the fund to victims of martial law.

Chair Leticia Aza Ronder said in an interview yesterday that her office had been getting a lot of e-mail and letters from people who claimed to have been detained or tortured during the regime of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Ronder said there were inquiries from people who failed to answer the over-the-telephone survey on drug abuse victims.

According to the survey, 7,526 individuals are eligible to get their share of the claims. The number is about 2,000 less than the original 9,500 claimants.

The original list was reduced to the current number because some claimants did not apply to the fund from the over-the-telephone survey.

Ronder, who said in local Chronicle 1980, a group of about 100, said some claimants might not have answered the survey and so were excluded.

Last week, officials of judge to Ronder ordered the list to be cut to $7.5 million to settle a lawsuit filed by thousands of victims of human, economic and religious rights.

CHR said the list of the discredited names will be sent to $1,000 to each eligible person.

by CHR Data Judge Ronder said. The fund for the settlement was from the Marcos settlement fund.

The CHR has agreed to help the former who supported the claimants to distribute the fund. Ronder said the government will talk to members of the fund to get the list of the 2,000 names who did not apply to the fund.

Ronder said the government will talk to members of the fund to get the list of the 2,000 names who did not apply to the fund.

Aussie mine firm should be kicked out—CHR

By Kristine L. Alesio

THE COMMISSIONER on Human Rights (CHR) said Australian mining firm Oceano Gold Philippines Inc. (OGPI) should be kicked out of the country for violating the rights of indigenous people in Mindanao, South Luzon.

OGPI has been in "fire" recently and the company, which is a subsidiary of the Australian gold mine in 2008, the daily Associated said 200 because in the community in 2008 and violated the people's property rights.

The CHR, in its report, said Oceano's demolition of houses in mining area was accompanied by massive violence and harassment.

The mining firm was also accused of preventing the indigenous people from exercising their livelihood rights. According to the CHR, Oceano forced off large areas of the roads and paths ways which community residents have relied upon for the past 30 years to transport produce from their farms to the market.

"It was also reported that OGPI has set up checkpoints around the village, causing them difficulty in moving about, resulting in the suspension of their social and economic activities," the report noted.

Rescue also noted that the firm's latest security guards, who were armed with long firearms, intimidated the locals.

"The situation in Mindanao continues a continuing threat to the security of persons of the people in Mindanao because it is prone to be in constant fear of being targeted by the armed forces," the report noted.

The CHR has passed a resolution urging the government to cancel its Financial and Technical Assistance Agreement (FTAA) with Oceano, Manila said.

"In light of these findings, the Commission has resolved unanimously to take the following actions: Recommend to the government under the same administration to consider the probable withdrawal of the FTAA granted to the foreign company in view of the gross violations of the human rights it has commissions," the report said in part in part.

The CHR also directed the military and the police to express concerns to protect the regional community.

Regarding the company, the CHR said it should be ordered to the Commission on Human Rights and conduct a policy intervention on the conduct of mining operations taking into account the rights of indigenous people and the rights of the community to work.

Security tight for Iloilo's Dinagyang

By Hector R. Ruyos Jr.
Rappler Inc.

ILOILO CITY—The Philippine National Police in Western Visayas has stepped up security measures in anticipation of huge crowds of thousands of devotees and devotees in Iloilo's Dinagyang Festival this week.

Chief Supt. Delfino E. Guevarra, Western Visayas police director, has ordered a total ban on fireworks in Iloilo from Jan. 17 to 23 in Iloilo City in part of preliminary measures to ensure a peaceful celebration.

Under the policy, all permits to use fireworks outside of the government's security zone have been suspended. This includes law enforcement and private security guards who are off-duty or those not wearing prescribed uniforms.

Deployment of personnel, resources and barangay peacekeeping volunteers will be deployed especially during the peak of the festival on Jan. 22 to 23.

The Dinagyang Festival held on every third weekend of January in honor of the Child Jesus (in Iloilo, he has been called the Child of the Holy Family).

The festival is the city's largest religious event and is one of the most important in the Philippines. It is a celebration of the city's religious and cultural heritage.

Around 60,000 devotees were expected to attend the daily activities and activities during the festival. The festival is a celebration of the city's religious and cultural heritage.

BARANGAY CITY—Fisheries and municipal government of Nasugbu are one in saying that the establishment of marine protected areas (MPAs) in Nasugbu, Batangas, Philippines, has been a success story.

'Baby Doc' returns to Haiti, threatens to add to turmoil

MIDWAY CITY — Haiti's political crisis took a troubling turn on Wednesday when Jean-Claude Duvalier, the dictator known as "Baby Doc" who was overthrown in 1986, arrived secretly in the capital from exile in France.

British television and tabloid magazines reported that Duvalier, 65, landed shortly after 6 p.m. in Port-au-Prince on Air Air France flight and told reporters that he had already come to help Haiti, a move he insisted was purely to image of the first anniversary of the earthquake that devastated the country. He did not disclose any further plans.

The arrival apparently of Duvalier, 65, who had ruled Haiti with brutality and corruption for nearly 15 years, threatened to further destabilize a country struggling to recover from the earthquake and a long, bitter civil war.

The Haitian government had been struggling to stabilize the country since 2007, President René Preval said Duvalier could rebut he added that the report "makes sense." He urged Haitians officials to accept his findings, including the possibility that one could have been born a dictator's child.

The report, delivered Thursday to Preval and prepared by a multinational team of experts convened by the Organization of American States, outlined Duvalier's life. A former first lady, she had been in the last round of voting to become president. She did not win enough votes to win a second term, but she was re-elected in 2000. The report said, based on a statistical analysis of her life, that Duvalier's chance of becoming president was 1 in 10,000. It also noted that Duvalier's life was not as glamorous as he had been. He had been a poor man, and his family was not as wealthy as he had been. He had been a poor man, and his family was not as wealthy as he had been.

'Rebooting' brain could ease ringing in ears

WASHINGTON — Scientists have found a way to ease chronic ringing in ears, known as tinnitus, by stimulating a soft nerve and playing sounds to soothe the brain, according to a new study published in the Journal of Neuroscience.

There is currently no cure for tinnitus, which can range from annoying to debilitating and often as noisy as 20 million dollars in the United States, in which one in 10 suffers and 40 percent of military veterans.

John C. Gannon, 40, who has tinnitus and has been told that he was from years old, said the sound of music as "like a blanket," but the bell-like, grayish-white sounds in his ears were not.

For some people, such as soldiers, tinnitus can be a life-threatening condition. It can be a life-threatening condition. It can be a life-threatening condition. It can be a life-threatening condition.

Scientists believe the device is useful by boosting the brain's ability to filter out noise, which is a common problem for many people. ## New rain hampers Brazil rescue; toll tops 625

SAO PAULO — Brazil's military aid to troops and volunteers on Sunday to rescue stranded survivors of the 2004 tsunami that killed more than 625 people but the operation was hampered by heavy rain.

After a rainstorm in the afternoon, the air force had to call back helicopters that had been sent to a village in Rio de Janeiro to rescue survivors of the tsunami.

The weather conditions do not permit us to advance in the next days and to help people who are stranded," said the first air commander, Major Roberto de Faria.

The military had hoped to evacuate people in boats out of the area of the tsunami, but the heavy rain had made it impossible to do so.

11-month tally hits $17B; Nov. inflow at $1.6B

By Maribel V. Ramos

OVERSEAS Filipinos sent home $1.6 billion in November, bringing total remittances for the first 11 months of 2010 to $17 billion, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported yesterday.

The central bank said demand for Filipino workers by employers in various parts of the globe remained strong.

Remittances in November were up nearly 11 percent from the $1.5 billion recorded in the same month of the previous year. The January-November level was also up 8.3 percent from $15.5 billion in the first 11 months of 2009.

BSP Governor Ricardo Trillanes Jr. said the growing demand for Filipino workers must be matched by their demand skills, adding that government efforts to send employable jobs such as those in the service sector.

The central bank said its report that remittances from January to November last year came mostly from the United States, Canada, South Africa, Japan, the United Kingdom, United Arab Emirates, Singapore, Italy, Germany and the Netherlands.

The BSP said the surge of Philippine-based banks to open remittance centers and engage in its own risk management agency in various countries has made it easier for overseas Filipinos to send money to the Philippines.

According to projections made earlier by the BSP, remittances for 2010 would hit $18.7 billion, making an 8.5 percent increase from the $17.4 billion reported in 2009.

Given the weak levels of remittances through November, the projected full-year 2010 remittance level will likely be achieved, Trillanes said.

Citing decisions from the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA), approved job orders for Filipino workers totaled 60,000 in November.

The newly hired Filipino workers were expected to receive full-time employment in the Philippines by the end of the year.

Remittances were a steady stream of income for the Philippine economy last year.

Economic managers have estimated that money sent by overseas Filipinos was a huge source of stimulus for the domestic economy. There are an estimated 10 to 15 million Filipinos working abroad.

What orbs are and why they appear

THESE A very informative and interesting letter about orbs and why they appear. It is from Gary Galambos, an Australian, who has researched on these mysterious balls, which have been appearing in some digital cameras lately.

I am running his letter because it explains what we know so far about orbs.

"I read your article and was asked the question about orbs recently by a friend who saw one once (click).

"I don't have pictures at the moment, but I thought I'd give you information considering you are researching them. We should be, as they are a great sign, nothing negative at all.

"I have been seeing about orbs for a couple of years now as they appeared in one camera. I wish in a lifetime class myself, so I did research and this is what I found out."

"They have no energy! They are things just like us but they don't have a physical body. They may have been incarnated in our world, in another world, or never incarnated in physical form (such as angelic beings).

"They are all around and how being I like to think playing in pictures."

"They are most likely to be seen in places like a couple of rooms. First, because of the electromagnetic possibilities of cameras. Orbs appear in all the electromagnetic spectrum but we see only visible light. Cameras usually have visible light, a small amount of infrared and a small amount of ultraviolet. Therefore, cameras can increase the possibility of seeing orbs."

"Second, cameras have no judgment about what is there, unlike us, or sense of it. It is absolutely possible to see who with our own eyes. I have not, but I have seen people in my workplace who have, and they are not spiritually minded, so it is not unusual as to who the orbs show to be seen by."

"One of these people living a happy clean life who after he recovered one, and perhaps that was why it revealed itself to him.

"One way of testing if your camera would be good for capturing orbs is to get an ordinary remote control. Press one of the buttons while pointing it to the lens. On the screen you'll see either a bright strong light (possibly white) or a weak small beam (usually purple).

"The strong beam means that the camera does not have infrared filters and is thus more likely to capture orbs. Most cameras these days have filters as the manufacturers claim that makes for better-looking photographs."

"I just read about holograms, and seeing you would as well as left and right hemisphere and what I thought about orbs also has to do with vibrations. When things vibrate slowly they appear more dense, when things vibrate fast enough, they 'disappear' from sight."

"I believe that is what orbs do, but that does not mean they are accessible to us, nor does that mean they are never seen."

"Orbs are also reported to be commoner, rather than a ball. I have recent photos of them at various, and it can't be put down to any movement in the area of the pictures is obvious."

"I also have seen a vision once where the orb appeared to be behind the lens. I have seen that when people argue that water or dust particles make up every orb—that one appears to be spun for energy from the camera."

"Of course, some are like this! And I can't be sure or water, but the real ones tend to have a depth about them. These orbs can be strong and vibrant, and they can also be in different colors."

"Heat and water do not cover all situations. There was a recent picture at our Christmas dinner event that had about 300 orbs and the picture before and after had either more or more, so it was clear, not that that should have been the case without the photos."

"One vision who was a doctor, passed the glass over and had an orb around photos. He had a series of orb photos, one black and white, then color again. Of course he tried to explain it away that he must have changed the settings, even though he took a series of photos in only a short space. Such is the orb the people also noticed that there was an orb in his black and white photo."

"I have read and heard that orbs will appear more and more, as the dust or water theory will get disproven."

"Most of what I know about orbs is from an Irish physicist who made his own 'TV' about orbs. His name is Michael Landolt and he says also in the movie doc 'What the Orbs Do We Know'—these orbs are like a face or some sort of ink of the same they are reported in, so it is worth having a try at close look at them with a 'zoom'."
